TALMAGE AND HIS BANJO

Why His Neighbors in Brooklyn Miss Him

The Rev. Dr. Talmage is sadly missed by his neighbors in Brooklyn in more ways than one. So if it is a "pleasant thing to be missel" the popular preacher probably has plenty of pleasure. Everybody knows that the doctor is fond of music, but they are maware that he can expertly play the banjo. Yet it is true.

Before he departed on his vacation he pretty regularly made the early evenings melodious with the mel low "nink-a-nunk, nank-a nunk, nank-

Such sweetly tuneful airs as "Annie Laurie," "Comin' Through the Rye" and "Away Down Upon the Suwanee Ribber" were favorites with him, and when he played them his eager auditors always felt like joining in the refrain. But now the house is silent and the banjo laid away.

The animal was seriously disfigured, and the owner conscived a novel idea of fixing her up. He visited a shughter house near by and secured a new tail and started for his home, happy over his scheme to save his pet animal from unfavorable comment.

He secured the necessary tools and set to work. The stub and new piece were carefully worked out into a good, job of dovetailing. He placed the ends together and they fitted like a charm. The joint was wrapped and tied with a heavy etring. All worked well for a few days, but the other morning he took the animal out for a stroll, met a crowd of friends and stopped to explain his patent. His achievement was simply wonderful to his hearers. But a moment later his labor and idea were a thing of the past. A large horsefly made its appearance and perched upon the animal's back. The stub commenced to work and the new end was thrown in the direction of the pest. Then it became detached and landed around the neck of the inventor. He blended with his friends to keep the matter quiet, but it leaked out, and now he is the subject of considerable fun at the hands of his fellow workmen.-Ex-
